Tom Mitchell has extensive experience representing financial institutions in structuring and documenting secured and unsecured lending transactions, including leveraged and investment grade syndicated and single-bank loan transactions. His practice focuses primarily on representing the agent bank in complex senior finance transactions, including transactions involving significant cross border components and multi-currency tranches, intercreditor issues related to subordinated and second lien financings, acquisition financings, special dividend and leveraged recapitalizations and/or debt restructurings.

He represents the agent bank and the lenders in credit facilities involving companies in a broad range of industries, including media and telecommunications, health care and financial services. He also has extensive experience representing financial institutions in Islamic financing transactions.
