Charlotte Litigation Member Ed O'Keefe presented at the Charlotte Economic Club's luncheon on April 19 at the Charlotte City Club. O'Keefe's presentation provided insight into where bank regulatory actions and lending is headed and the impact it will have on our economy such as lower new business starts, lower employment, slower recovery and greater income inequality. The presentation also discussed the overall impact of political and regulatory actions including higher prices for high-risk activities and the bank's lending role being shared with non-banks.

The Charlotte Economics Club's mission is to provide leadership in the use and understanding of economic information and industry trends that affect our region's economic growth. Luncheon meetings are held monthly except July and August. Guest speakers are leaders in their fields and offer timely and insightful presentations
