

Taylor Discusses FTC Role in Cybersecurity Debate

FedScoop
09.2014

Charlotte Senior Counsel Todd Taylor was quoted in FedScoop on September 16. The article “The FTC’s expanding cybersecurity influence,” addresses the FTC’s growing role in the national cybersecurity debate. FTC efforts include work to expand its authorities under Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and also punitive enforcement actions targeting companies that have failed to take appropriate measures to protect consumer information.

“The Wyndham ruling will likely embolden the FTC to more aggressively go after retailers that have experienced data breaches,” Taylor said. “Whether they will do so in the case of Home Depot, Target or others remains to be seen.”

FedScoop is a growing tech media company that provides its audience with breaking government tech news and is the government IT community’s platform for education and collaboration. FedScoop engages top leaders from the White House, federal agencies, academia and the tech industry both online and in person to discuss ways technology can improve government, and to exchange best practices and identify how to achieve common goals.