Beth Buckner is a member within Moore & Van Allen's Federal & International Taxation group. Her practice includes consulting on federal, state, local tax matters and economic development matters.

Beth negotiates economic development tax incentive packages at the federal, state and local levels for relocating or expanding businesses throughout the country with a focus on businesses expanding or relocating in the Southeast. In addition to modeling potential incentive award packages and negotiating incentive packages, Beth's practice includes assisting economic development package recipients with the ongoing monitoring, compliance and reporting associated with such packages.

Beth has experience advising corporations, partnerships, limited liability companies and public service companies on a broad range of state and local taxation matters including assisting these clients with planning, compliance, controversy and policy matters. Beth advises clients on matters involving a broad range of tax types including corporate income, franchise, sales and use, occupancy, license, gross receipts and property taxes.

In addition, Beth has experience assisting clients in calculating and claiming research development credits at the federal and state levels and with the classification and treatment of fixed assets.
