Charleston Employment Member Brandon Gaskins was quoted in The Post and Courier on July 13, 2017. The article, "Apartment complex near Ben Sawyer Boulevard gets green light in town of Mount Pleasant lawsuit settlement," discusses a settlement which will allow Middle Street Partners to build up to 224 apartments, with construction delayed until at least March 2019 due to the town's moratorium on apartment construction.

Gaskins represented Middle Street Partners in the case and commented on town officials who negotiated the settlement, including Mayor Linda Page, Councilmen Joe Bustos and Elton Carrier, and the town's legal team and planning officials. "We were certainly under the impression that Mr. Bustos supported the agreement," Gaskins said. "There are significant compromises on our side, and they were designed to satisfy certain elements on Town Council, including Mr. Bustos."
