Charlotte Immigration Member Steve Hader was named in Business North Carolina Daily Digest on October 15. The article titled, "Foreign business suspending N.C. love affair?," highlights the N.C. Economic Developers Association's fall meeting where the key topic likely will be international investment.

Hader says he's noticed a sharp decline in foreign direct investment in North Carolina over the last six months. A variety of reasons may explain the change, he says, including Chinese fiscal policy, tighter immigration rules and increased trade tensions between the U.S. and several other nations. The two biggest Chinese stock markets have declined by 20% to 30% so far this year, shaking investor confidence.
