Charlotte Litigation Member Tony Lathrop was quoted in the July 2012 issue of InsideCounsel magazine. The article in which he was quoted, "6 cases and litigation trends affecting in-house counsel," overviews recent notable court cases and litigation developments that have spurred change within today's corporate law practice, and introduced new challenges to in-house counsel. Lathrop specifically addresses AT&T Mobility v. Concepcion, a case that was decided more than one year ago, but continues to stir up controversy.

Lathrop stated that "in-house counsel's wheels started turning' after Concepcion. 'They started thinking about revising their agreements wherever they could.'"
