MVA firm Chairman Tom Mitchell has been quoted in a May 29 Mecklenburg County press release regarding the County's toolkit designed to help a variety of area businesses reopen safely as the community moves through the Governor's Stay Safer at Home Order Phase Two. The Business Leaders Roundtable group, of which Mitchell is a member, was created by Mecklenburg County Manager Dena R. Diorio. The toolkit is a more detailed follow-up to the first toolkit the group released during Phase One of the Governor's Order a few weeks ago.

Mitchell, who serves as Charlotte Executive Leadership Council (CELC) Community Engagement/Economic Development Co-Chair states, "This toolkit provides business leaders across the community with a blueprint for a safe return to the workplace, and it is our hope that organizations across the region will adhere closely to the recommendations in the toolkit as they design and roll-out their respective company plans."
