COMMITTEE MEETING

Lottery Oversight Committee

The Lottery Oversight Committee met on Wednesday, September 18th. The highlight of the meeting was discussion around the Lottery Commission's plan to offer online subscriptions for certain games. Specifically, the Commission will allow people to purchase online subscriptions for live-draw games (such as Powerball, MegaMillions, and Carolina Cash 5), subject to a number of conditions. Those conditions are designed to ensure that the online subscriptions are purchased only by those who are old enough to purchase tickets and who are present in the state at the time of purchase. Under a subscription, a player purchases the same set of numbers for each draw of a particular game over a set period of time. Each subscription must span a period of at least two weeks and each player is limited to a maximum weekly expenditure for all subscriptions of $70.

The Lottery Commission currently has the legal authority to offer online subscriptions, therefore approval by the Oversight Committee was not necessary for the Commission's proposal to advance. Although Alice Garland, the Executive Director of the North Carolina Education Lottery, stated that the proposal had been thoroughly vetted through individual conversations with legislative leaders and in a number of public Commission meetings, a number of members of the Oversight Committee were concerned that the issue had not previously been brought to the attention of the Committee. These members were primarily concerned about the player age-verification process, the effect on sales of lottery tickets in existing outlets, the effect on retail sales of other items that might be bought along with lottery tickets in in-person transactions, and the perceived similarities between online subscriptions of lottery tickets and other forms of online gaming that have been prohibited. A representative of the NC Retail Merchants Association was allowed to address the Committee and echoed these concerns.
